The activity “Page” allows you to compile more extensive texts, images and even short videos via an editor.

In certain cases, it may be desirable to use the “Page” activity instead of an uploaded text-processed document - especially if the document contains text that should only be read and not downloaded.

Instructions on how to upload images to your course can be found on moodle.org.
